

Trademark Rectification

Trademark rectification is the process of correcting errors or modifying details in a registered trademark. This includes amending ownership details, making classification changes, or removing trademarks registered with incorrect information. Rectification is necessary when mistakes are found in the original registration, when a business undergoes restructuring, or when disputes arise over a mark's validity.

Common Reasons for Trademark Rectification

- Clerical Errors – Spelling mistakes, incorrect addresses, or classification errors.
- Change in Ownership – Transfer due to mergers, acquisitions, or assignments.
- Incorrectly Registered Trademark – Removal of marks registered fraudulently or in violation of legal provisions.

Process of Trademark Rectification

1. Filing a Rectification Petition – Submit an application with necessary documents to the Trademark Registry.
2. Review by the Registry – Authorities examine the rectification request and supporting evidence.
3. Opposition Period – If any third party challenges the rectification, a hearing may be scheduled.
4. Final Decision – The Registrar approves or denies the requested modifications.
